

PROXISANTÉ : POPULATION HEALTH MANAGEMENT

Introduction

The Proxisanté reform aims to develop a territorial organization that encourages stakeholders to coordinate their interdependence to build a collective response to all the health and social needs of a population living in a given territory.

- Population responsibility
- Proportionate universalism
- Proactivity

➡ A real paradigm shift

➡ To improve the health and well-being of the population, while taking into account current challenges (ageing, costs, pressure on the healthcare system)

Front line organization

- Local areas : system core (no direct intervention)
- Local Health Organizations: support the development of population health management; coordinate interdependencies and guarantee accessibility, continuity and quality of services and between services
 - ➔ 10 on the territory in Wallonia
- Macro level: the various instances support territorial dialogue, reinforce the competences of the local Health Organizations, guide and develop the system

Population Health Management

Population health management is necessary to support actors and governance structures at different levels of the territory in developing their population accountability.

It enables to :

- initiate or stimulate reflection
- identify priorities for the territory
- assess the need to modify any element of the system
- define health objectives and initiate action plans

 The better your understanding of the system, the better the actions you can take on it.

Population Health Management

It lies at the heart of the Local Health Organization missions. To be a supporter, it must meet certain conditions :

- The PHM is part of a learning and adaptive dynamic
- We're not aiming for a predictive model, BUT for a narrative of the territory
- Indicators = means of building a shared understanding of a territory
- Indicators available via a dashboard
- Indicators directly mobilized by 1st line
- A limited set of indicators, useful for the majority of the issues the LHO wants to address

Current situation

- Publication in the Moniteur Belge of the “Décret du 25 AVRIL 2024 relatif à l'organisation de la première ligne d'accompagnement et de soins »
- AGW “territorialisation” in 3rd reading
- Continuation of working group on population management and operationalization of dashboard
